

Around alone

Alan Paris, the Bermudian planning to sail solo around the world in September, has combined the challenge of a single-handed circumnavigation around the world with an educational challenge for students.

His effort deserve support from the whole community, both for the challenge he has undertaken and for the fact that school children will have a chance to learn about the world as they follow his progress.